Chapter 1 by Story Wars

It was the fifth year my mother and two brothers were taken by them and I was stuck here in this two-bedroom, four day amounted water, moldy old cottage on the outskirts of the only town seen in two hundred twenty-one miles with a population of thirty or fourty. It sucked more than you could ever imagine.

Not that I have an enormous amount of grief for my situation but it's not really the best. Expecially since the outskirts is pretty much in the middle of nowhere besides town and I can't go into town to get things I need really. Im not saying I can't altogether it's just that they're control over everything and everyone that passes through the gates and gets seen. If I want food or something I'd have to go through the shadow holes, and let me just tell you it's not easy running for the shadows.

I've tried looking for my mom and brothers every time I'd go into town but I'm not too sure now if even they're in there anymore. I don't mean they've gotten away or anything like that because if they did then they would've come to get me. The stupid old cottage is our safe house, which no ones been in thirty-two years. Well, besides me of course. It's hard you know being 4"11 and 14 trying to keep myself alive on my own out where every day and every night I could get trampled and eaten or taken or just walked by. I can't get any things in a town in a world that no one would help if I needed.

The cottage isn't my first place I've lived. I've lived in many places but I left because well that's where my family was taken and even after any other person I've ever stayed with as well because after I escaped from not being taken I became a fugitive.
